McAdoo Says Party Is Not Dead

Wm. G. McAdoo, in a statement scores partisan and unworthy political appeals to class and racial prejudices in which the republican leaders have dealt for the past years for political purposes, says the Ironton Register. Mr. McAdoo's statement follows:

"What the country imperatively needs now is subsidence of the passions and hatred engendered by the war and the partisan political appeals that have followed. The country is sick of political slanders and controversies. It wants domestic as well as international peace, and it wants restoration of that fine spirit of co-operation which made Americans invincible in war. We face domestic and international problems of great gravity.

"The only way to solve them is through co-operation. The highest duty of the leaders of both parties is, therefore, to promote better feeling among all classes of our people, to refrain from unworthy appeals to class and racial prejudices and to bring to bear upon our serious problems that dispassionate and intelligent consideration through which alone there is promise of genuine public service.

"The democrat party has suffered a severe but not disastrous defeat. It is far from dead; it is not even seriously wounded. Throughout our history overwhelming political reverses have been followed by political recoveries. So long as the democrat party is true to its mission of service to the common people it will live. What we must do now is to build up and strengthen the party organization, not in the interest of any individual or group or faction, but for the cause of democracy itself, and above all, for the service of country. It will be difficult, through proper leadership and organization, to re-inspire party unity, to maintain party ideals and principles and to regain popular confidence. To this task democratic leaders must now devote themselves with unselfish patriotism and courage."

Of all the exchanges reaching the Republican office and containing tables of the late election returns, none are more interesting than those from Ripley county—where margins were smallest and

PRESENTING A FLEET CHAMPION
HIS BELT

One of the greatest series of championship bouts in the history of Naval listiana was witnessed the other evening when men of the Atlantic Fleet competed for championship honors aboard the U.S.S. Arizona, anchored in the Hudson.

An hour before the time for the opening of the show the men from the various ships had taken their seats near the ring. As time went on the stand constructed on the deck became filled and the men climbed on the turrets, then the masts and finally the yard-arm held its quota of visiting sailors who had come to cheer their favorites to victory. The masts of the Arizona looked for all the world like a village of cave dwellers with the numerous white-clothed sailors clinging to it for support.

With the twinkling lights of New York skyscrapers in the distance, the occasional shriek of some pudgy little launch passing the ship and the clouds overhead for a canopy, the setting was one to be remembered by the sporting writers of the various newspapers and news bureaus who had gathered at the ringside for the event.

The tap of the gong brought an end to the buzz of conversation, and a few seconds after two lithe, muscular figures climbed through the ropes. After a few preliminaries, the referee called the principals, B.H. Hillard of the U. S. S. Utah, and S. Castelucci of the U. S. S. Nevada to the center of the ring and the battle for the lightweight belt was on. It was a fight that will be remembered by everyone present and one that sent the spectators away with a smile. Both men were trying by every bit of science they could call into play to slip over a knockout blow. It was evident from the start that Hillard had the edge on the fighting and his terrific body blows were slowing up his opponent. After two minutes of fighting in the fourth round Hillard shifted his attack from the body, crossed a right to the jaw and a left to the stomach and Castelucci was counted out.

Hillard, who enlisted in the Navy in September, 1919, is a resident of Buffalo and is an excellent example of what Navy training will do for a man.

The two photographs above show the Captain of the U. S. S. Utah presenting the belt to Hillard and Hillard all dressed up in his new champion suit and wearing the victor's smile.

where much evidence of scratching is shown. Harding carried the county by 16 votes, receiving a total of 1752 to 1736 for Cox. John L. Sullivan for Secretary of State received one more vote than Charles U. Becker, the republican; for judge of the Supreme Court, Conway Elder and W. T. Ragland received the same—1752 and 1752. Atkinson ran 53 votes ahead of Hyde and Ripley county is the home county of Atkinson, the democratic candidate for governor. For congress, Hays ran 26 ahead of R. L. Ward, while the democratic candidate for representative in the Missouri Legislature, Charles L. Ferguson, ran 273 ahead of the republican candidate, J. M. Wright—Poplar Bluff Republican.

A thousand men employed in the timber interests in Poplar Bluff and Butler county were laid off last week. We do not know what is the cause, but we do know that if Cox had been elected, that is what the republicans would be saying is the matter.—Ironton Register.

"The first winter I used Dr. LeGear's Poultry Prescription, it made me a lot of money. I have 61 hens and sold in January $14.00 worth of eggs, besides what we used ourselves."—C. D. McCorrick, Irmo, Idaho.

A hen can't molt and lay at the same time. Poultry raisers who get an abundance of eggs, use Dr. LeGear's Poultry Prescription, which pulls hens thru the molt in short order, tones up the system and stimulates the egg-producing organs without injury. If you want eggs this winter when eggs mean money get Dr. LeGear's Poultry Prescription from your dealer right to-day. Dr. LeGear is America's foremost Expert Poultry Breeder and Veterinarian. For any ailment whatever among your poultry or stock get his remedies from your dealer. They must satisfy you, or your dealer will refund your money.
